When your doctor looks at your results, he or she may want you to have another Overnight sleep study wearing a Continuous Positive airway Pressure (CPAP) machine. This is a small machine that blows room air through a mask worn over your nose. We provide the CPAP machine but bring your own mask and tubing if you already are using a machine at home.

Overnight Sleep Study

When you come to the Sleep Laboratory you put on your sleeping clothes and get ready for bed.

The goals of this study are to:

- Observe how well you breathe and how much you move when you sleep
- Observe how much you sleep
- Measure the amount of oxygen flowing through your body
- Measure your heart rate and rhythm

The technician connects you to the equipment and explains what he or she is doing and why.

You will have several small metal disks attached to your head. These allow us to observe if you have light, deep or dreaming sleep.

You also wear:

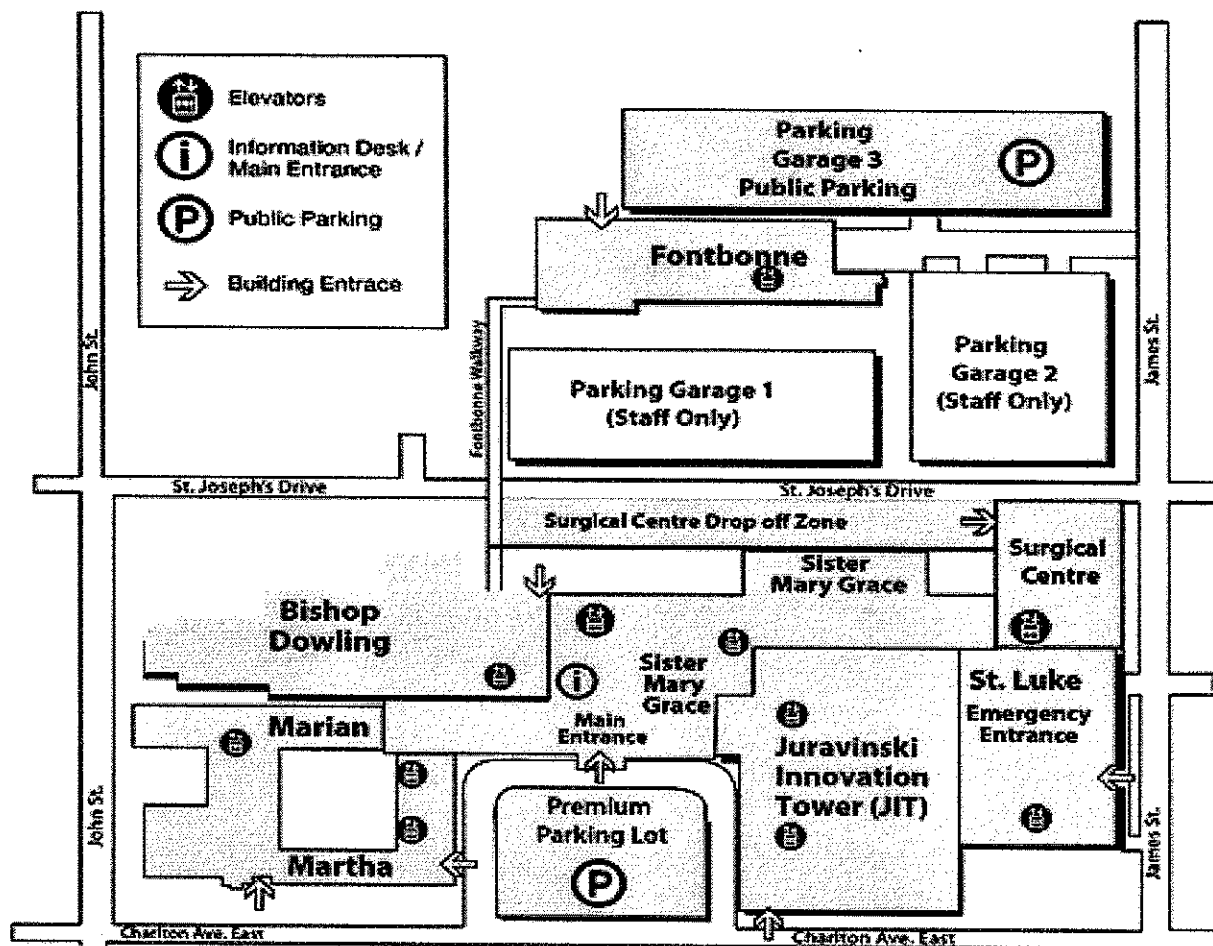

- A vest over your sleep clothes that records your breathing pattern
- A sensor under your arm to record your oxygen level – this not always done
- A sensor under your nose to look at breathing flow
- 2 electrode disks on your chest to record heart rhythm
